What is friendship and what are the characteristics that a true friend should have? Read on and you will know more in this interesting article.

Friendship is a devoted relationship between two people in which both of them have true feelings of love, care and affection for each other without any demands and misunderstandings. Friendship has no limitations of age, gender, position, caste and religion. It is as pure as water and friends are like stars in the night sky. Although they seldom shine, they are still always there.

There are many friends in the world who are together at the time of prosperity. But how many out there are true, sincere and faithful friends who never let us be alone in bad times, and times of hardship and trouble? It is during such bad times which make us realize who our good friends are and who the bad ones are too.

We all need friends in our daily lives, as 'no man is an island'. Friends would help each other during difficulties. They would also share their happiness. As the idiom says, 'A friend in need is a friend indeed', good friends are always there to give us support and advice.

Friends are like angels of happiness. Without them, we would be lonely and our lives filled with sadness. Close friends can also be considered our family members. They care about us every day. When we are upset, our friends are willing to help. We could share some of our secrets and problems with them.

As a true friend, we should not be suspicious of each other. True friends would always forgive each other for the mistakes done. In addition, true friends are always honest to us. They would not try to cheat or trick us.

However, choosing our good friends is essential. For instance, if we befriend drug addicts, we would be persuaded to try dangerous drugs. This would affect our health and destroy our future. So, think carefully before befriending anyone, especially strangers we meet on social networks.

Friends are indeed very important to us. I hope everyone would appreciate one's friendship with another after reading this article. Appreciate the friendship between you and your friend and treasure this precious relationship carefully in your lives.
