

Friendship

A friendship is a relationship between two people or more. Friends are people who share close bonds with each other besides one's family members. It is very important to choose a good friend who will help you to be a better person.

Why does friendship play such an important role in our lives? Without friends, life will be dull because there will be no one to share our happiness and sadness with. When you pass your exam with flying colours, friends will cheer for you and feel happy for your success. On the other hand, you can pour your hearts out to them when you feel down or face difficulties. A friend in need is a friend indeed. They will suggest useful solutions to your problems or give you advice to help you feel better. Some friends seem nice to you when you are successful or wealthy. However, these fair-weather friends will leave you behind when they no longer find you as successful or wealthy as before.

Having good friendships influences you in a positive way. It makes you more cheerful, confident and outgoing. You enjoy every moment when you are with them and you like being with them. People who get on like a house on fire like doing things together as this gives them a sense of belonging. For example, friends who are into reading can learn from each other. They can obtain different knowledge which helps in their learning and thinking. As the saying goes, birds of a feather flock together. Such relationships usually last longer and it is beneficial to everyone.

Besides, having good relationships fosters moral values in a person. You will learn to be brave, hardworking, honest, patient or even punctual. This helps you stay away from all the bad habits.

Good friendships guide you to the right path. Together, you can make a difference, a big difference. You will become someone who is always ready to contribute towards the betterment of the society and the country.

All in all, friendships are important to every person. Choose the right friends because they can help to decide who you will become. True friendship is one of the best things life can offer.
